

APOSTOLIC SUCCESSION

April 18, A.D. 2017

Apostolic succession is the unbroken line of bishops by the laying on of hands stretching back to the apostles of Jesus Christ. The Orthodox Anglican Church® has always insisted that Apostolic Succession was God's will for the Church. The Orthodox Anglican Church was organized in the early 1960's and incorporated on March 6, A.D. 1964. The jurisdiction represented the first noteworthy group of Anglicans departing from the Episcopal Church since 1873.

The Apostolic Succession of the current bishops of the Orthodox Anglican Church can simply be traced back to the Anglican succession maintained in the original consecrations of Continuing Anglicans. This succession includes the following bishops: the Rt Revd Albert A. Chambers (#588), the Rt Revd Francisco Pagtakhan, the Rt Revd Charles D. D. Doren, and the Rt Revd Robert S. Morse.

Chambers Succession

+Albert A. Chambers, 1962 (#588)

+Robert S. Morse, 1978

*+George D. Stenhouse, 1990

‡Thomas E. Gordon, 2012

*+Albert A. Chambers was also co-consecrator to +George D. Stenhouse by letter of consent.

The Apostolic Succession of the current bishops of the Orthodox Anglican Church consists of other lines of: Anglican succession, Continuing Anglican succession, Eastern Orthodox succession through the Moscow Patriarchate, and the Rebiban succession of the Roman Catholic Church (including the Duarte Costa line).

July 22, AD 2012, ‡T. Creighton Jones, +George D. Stenhouse, and three other bishops lay hands on ‡Thomas E. Gordon
